Jean-Pierre de Glutz appointed new Head of Geneva branch

The Vontobel Group has named Jean-Pierre de Glutz as the new Head of its Geneva branch. He succeeds Cédric Anker, who has decided to resign.

With the appointment of Jean-Pierre de Glutz, the Vontobel Group is entrusting the running of its Geneva branch to a highly experienced and seasoned private banker and manager. De Glutz joined the Vontobel Group at the end of 2009 in connection with the acquisition of Commerzbank (Schweiz), where he held various management positions during a period of over 20 years. Prior to that, he worked at Chase Manhattan Bank (Switzerland) and Credit Suisse, where he was responsible for international operations in the areas of both private banking and asset management. "I am delighted that Jean-Pierre de Glutz, who has a profound knowledge of Swiss and international private banking and asset management, has accepted this position. Drawing on his many years of experience, he will ensure that our integrated business model with our core competencies in wealth and asset management and investment banking becomes even more firmly established in the French-speaking region of Switzerland and he will oversee its expansion," stated Herbert J. Scheidt, CEO of the Vontobel Group.
