WHY INFRASTRUCTURE?

- Assets provide essential services with significant opportunity in the energy transition
- Long-term, predictable and inflation-linked cash flow
- Low correlation to other asset classes with resilience to volatility and economic downturns
- Growing market with a significant and increasing requirement to meet capital needs for energy transition and GDP growth
- Public sector budgets are increasingly under pressure; governments incentivising private sector investment
- Broad alignment with sustainability
- Returns are expected to be resilient through all market conditions

WHY MID-MARKET INFRASTRUCTURE?

Attractive risk-adjusted returns

Attractive Supply-Demand Dynamics

Far greater number of investible opportunities in the mid-market
5.5x the volume of mid-market transactions (50m-1bn) than large cap (1bn+) in L5Y<sup>1</sup>

Sourcing

Ability to source on a bi-lateral basis compared to larger transactions, which are typically competitive auctions

Diversification

Investors typically already invested with a large manager, the mid-market provides diversity

Infrastructure of Tomorrow

Energy transition and decarbonisation are typically resulting in initially smaller investments which are best suited to a mid-market approach and can grow into opportunities to be sold to a larger manager

Value Creation

More opportunities to create value. Assets typically had less focus historically and benefit from the network and expertise a specialist manager can provide

Exit

Easier route to exit with a larger potential buyer universe following active asset management

Risks associated with infrastructure investments include, but are not limited to, the following: completion risks; usage risks; leverage; regulatory and political risks; sensitivity to economic cycles; concentration risks; illiquidity; high capital expenditures; and environmental risks. Private market investments also involve a number of risks, including illiquidity, potentially lower transparency, longer investment commitments; leverage; and may engage in speculative investment practices that increase the risk of investment loss. Prospective investors should understand such an investment is typically only suitable for persons of adequate financial means who have the necessary liquidity with respect to their investment and who can bear the economic risks associated with such an investment.

Environmental, social and governance (“ESG”) investing and criteria employed may be subjective in nature. The considerations assessed as part of ESG processes may vary across types of investments and issuers and not every factor may be identified or considered for all investments. Information used to evaluate ESG components may vary across providers and issuers as ESG is not a uniformly defined characteristic. ESG investing may forego market opportunities available to strategies which do not utilize such criteria. There is no guarantee the criteria and techniques employed will be successful.

Case Study I – Client Profiling

AI Use Cases

Seamless Integration of AI Capabilities into Private Client Processes

Case Study II – Scalability

Cloud Usage

Scalable and cost optimized cloud business case: High Performance Computing Grid

We invested in an Azure high performance compute grid to provide Structured Products prices.

- Modern containerized deployment using Docker on Linux VMs, allowing a high release cadence and multiple library versions
- Employing Azure Scale sets to ramp up number of employed virtual machines to a desired number within seconds
- Resilient failover-safe setup using 2 Azure regions and 3 availability zones within each region
- Secure network connectivity using Azure Express Route with automatic failover
- Shouldering base load via long-term fixed subscriptions (cost optimized)

On an average day we typically employ between 3,840 and 10,240 CPU cores simultaneously.

Deep learning for structured product pricing using cloud computation

We help the business to grow while not taking more risks

Enhancing speed and efficiency in Structured Products pricing and hedging is key to master increasing client demand

- Typical elements of derivative pricing can be “learned” using deep neural networks
- The generation of large meaningful training sets is key and can be achieved using our elastic scalable grid environment, including access to a powerful GPU cluster on Microsoft Azure
- The trained models get seamlessly integrated into our proprietary valuation and risk infrastructure
- With deep learning of elements in complex models we currently speed up our algorithms by a factor 3-5, increasing the frequency of risk reports and getting prices to our clients faster
